

Abstract

A method for triggering a restraint system is provided, in which the threshold value calculation, performed by using the acceleration signal, is adapted by an add-on amount
5 which is determined from signal properties of the acceleration signal and the speed signal. Signals from an up-front sensor can be taken into account in addition.

(Figure 1)